ANGELS HELP TEXAS MAN RAISE MONEY FOR CHILDREN'S MIRACLE NETWORK

July 18, 2005 Abilene, Texas -- Children's Miracle Network will use the 2006 Unseen Wings calendar to raise money for children's hospitals. Unseen Wings creator John Bunton uses photos to depict everyday life situations where angels are present watching over or helping an unsuspecting person.

Last year over $60,000 was raised through the sale of the Unseen Wings Calendar. Houston based WoodForest National Bank sold the calendar in each of its 130 locations and donated more than $40,000 to Children's Miracle Network. Other sponsors included Wal-Mart, Credit Unions for Kids, Kiwanis Club and McLane Company.

The goal is for Unseen Wings to raise over $100,000 this year. Calendars will be sold through the first of 2006.

People can order calendars at www.unseenwings.com.

Bunton says, "My calendar is not your typical collection of photos of half-dressed women selling hot wings or hunky bare-chested fireman, but it is for kids who desperately need our help and I hope that alone is compelling enough for people to purchase this calendar. You can be an angel this fall and support your local Children's Miracle Network hospital so we can all help kids get back to what's important, being kids."
